Economic Challenges for Energy

Madrid, 16 de febrero de 2018 / February 16, 2018

CV

Michel Colombier

Colombier is co-founder and Scientific Director of Iddri (Institute for Sustainable Development and International Relations) since 2001. He was before Director General of ICE (International Consulting on Energy) developing activities at both local (cities, regions) and international level (governments, international institutions and firms); Senior Advisor to the Minister of Energy; Head of the “Strategy and Evaluation” Department of Ademe (French Agency for Environment and Energy); and Programme Manager at the Ministry of Environment in Portugal. He has developed a wide operational expertise in the field of Energy and Environment but always maintained a strong connection with the University, teaching and developing research activities (now at SciencesPo Paris). He served as member of the Scientific and Technical Advisory Panel of the GEF (Global Environment Facility) and the FFEM (Fonds Français d’Environnement Mondial), negotiator in the UNFCCC process and director of the Board of Climate Strategies (London). He is now Chairman of the Expert Committee for the Energy Transition in France.
