Dr. Nadia Millington

Dr Nadia Millington is the Deputy Director of the Masters in Social Innovation and Entrepreneurship at the LSE. Her academic credentials include a Masters in Management Organisations and Governance from LSE and an MBA from the University of Bath; gaining distinctions and top awards in both (noteworthy is the Academic Excellence prize, having gained distinctions in all subjects during her Masters). Her PhD, also from LSE, is based on longitudinal qualitative research in Bangalore, India at one of the world's most innovative companies. Here Dr Millington focused on defining the underlying mechanisms driving failure of the firm to innovate new business models for the poorest markets (often referred to as the base of the pyramid). This two year experience of dealing with poverty in India, combined with her involvement in a social enterprise she co-founded in Brazil, further fuelled a passion to focus on the world's most pressing problems of poverty and inequality. Before taking up her academic appointment Dr Millington worked as a strategy consultant advising Boards and Senior Management in the financial and public sectors in the Caribbean and the UK.
